

Anthony Riem

Partner

PCB Litigation LLP

Over the last 15 years, Anthony has been instructed to act in numerous cases involving international commercial litigation as well as many high profile property disputes. He was involved in one of the first investigations brought by the FSA into market manipulation.

His cases have ranged from metal trading to breaches of trust, from regulatory matters to the value of property investments.

He has had a number of cases reported in the Times and other law reports and he has presented many papers on international litigation and related issues to organisations such as the International Chamber of Commerce, the International Maritime Bureau, the Institute of Public Finance and the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy as well as companies and government institutions. He is regularly asked for comment by the media.

Anthony writes a monthly article for In-House Lawyer and is a regular contributor to other publications such as the E-Commerce Law Reports. He is the author of the chapter on civil fraud of the LexisNexis publication, Fraud: Law, Practice and Procedure and is one of the contributors to the UK Fraud Manual of the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners.

Anthony is a member of the Law Society Working Party on Civil Fraud and is recommended by the Legal 500, as one of the specialists in dealing with this area of the law.

Anthony graduated from Leicester University in 1985 before joining PCB in 1991 as a solicitor. He became a partner in 1996. He joined a nationwide practice in 2001 where he was described in the Legal 500 as one of its key partners before returning to PCB in 2005.
